The Manchester Guardian of the 4th instants:

A fearful colliery explosion, involving the death of no less than eight perons, and the injury of eight others, occurred on Thursday morning, at a pit, named Baxter's No. 3 Pit, at Winstanley, near Wigan. The number of men and boys employed in the pit la question is about forty, and on Thursday, at the customary hour of leginning work, thirty-seven persons descended, all appeared to progress favorably, till about ten o clock, when the explosion took place in the workings. A descent into the mins was soon made, when it was found that a number of the men, who had been working nearest the shaft, were making their way to the pit eye. They were at once sent up. Further efforts released others of the men, and altogether twenty-one were brought up, having escaped with a slight scorching.

The choke damp was, however, found to be so dense that it was with the greatest danger the workings could be searched, and a considerable time elapsed before any more was zent up. At last the praiseworthy efforts of the searchers were rewarded, and sight more of the unfortunate fellows were recovered, some of whom, unhappily, were severely burned, and some reaching the top in a state of insensibility. One man was, at first, considered dead, but restoratives being administered, he rallied. Twenty-nine persons had now been recovered, but as it was known that eight others were in the mine, the efforts were not in the slightest relaxed, and at great personal risk the search was prosecuted. Two hours singsed before anything was known, and then seven deal bodies followed each other to the surface in rapid succession. The state of the mine was now such that one body had to be left in the pit sill sesterday morning, when it was recovered.

Explanation of the Appearance of Frogs averse harm.—Frogs, toads and other hatrachian reptiles, are reproduced from eggs, and the period required for hatching terminates so undeviatingly at a stated time, that hundreds and even thousands of them burst their shells in the course of an hour or two, and hop out to astonish people into the belief that they must have failen from the clouds. Their sppearance at or about the time of rain, is probably owing to the increased heat which some times precedes or follows showers, and which would facilitate their escape from the shell by increasing their activity. The same phenomenon has been observed in regard to alligators and turtles, which lay their eggs in the sand on banks of rivers and the shores of the ise. The eggs are hatched so simultaneously that hundreds of young alligators or turtles may be seen emerging from their sandy nests and making for the water at the same time.

Distriction Accurate Twenty Man Burned with Motton Inox.—At Russell's foundery, in Chicago, the other day, a number of men were engaged in casting, when one of them accidentally spilled his ladle of molten from into the booth of another. He let that fall, and in an instant the fluid spread throughout the shop, so verely burning about twenty persons. Some of them were horribly burned in the breast and legs, but not fafally.

Signov Farini at Niegara—A Worth; Rival of Blendle in his Entracediant; Feats, Signov Farini made his first ascension on Weshesday, and was quite successful. His rope hangs with a reflection of from sixty to seventy feet, at a safe distance therefrom; below the town on the American side, and perhaps a third of a mile down the river from the Clifton House on the Canada side. It is 1,800 feet long, three-stranded, of manilla, two inches thick, and weighing 4,500 Ba. It is secured by 140 guys of five-eights rope, in the construction of which 50,000 feet of rope were employed. The Courier cays:

At the point chosen, the gorge is nearly it its widest. The river rolls beneath at a depth of about 170 or 180 feet, masy and smooth, but with great flecks of foam marking the mighty eddies in which its ponderous waters are whireled.

The band struck up and Farini went down, very slowly and doubtfully at first, for he had not gone ten feet when a difficulty appeared which threatened to be fatal. His pole was long and limber, and became entangled in the gays at every step. Poised above the awful gulf, he had to stand in the most painful and laborious manner to extricate it from its entanglement. The odds seemed to be terribly against him at this moment. There was an outery that he never would cross, and forms few moments of sickening suspense, in which he struggled with his pole, we believe half the crowd arpected to see him fall. But the Signor has pluck and nerve. Undaunted he held on his way, and after working for some time as we have described, he sat-down. He stood up, first on his feet and then on his head, and looked withal so cool about it, that confidence was restored. Slowly he proceeded, making frequent stops and repeating his gymnastic. He hung by his heels, by his elbow, by his hands, lay down on his back, and finally stood on one foot without his balancing pole. In about half as hour he had wrought his way up to the Canada shore, where he was enthus astically received, a hand on that side playing "Hall Columbia" the while.

where he was enthusiastically received, a hand on that side playing "Hall Columbia" the while.

After having gone up to the Clinton House for refreshment, he returned, and at twenty minutes past five was again on the rope. In the center he stopped, and the Maid of the Mist, which had been lying off and on, with a large number of passengers aboard, came directly beneath him. He dropped a cord, which was caught on board, and thus he drew up a rope, passing the end over his cable, and securing a fouble line for his perilous descent. In less than half a minute he had slid, not "head foremost," but and over hand, down the righty or a hundred feet to the deck of the boat. In a few minutes he had reserved himself for the ascent, which was a tougher business. He drew himself up, however, and offer some more gromestics, was nearly on the American side again. To show that he was not used up by his appailing hour a work he gave a pass evil, keeping time to the insist of the band as he came achore.

The universal sentiment was, that he had displayed, under the circumstances, a nerve fully equal to that of Blondin. He does not fully equal to that of Blondin. In Portan-Prince, the capital, out of 420 children born, only thirty were legitimate. Extraordinary Experiment Taking Pho-tegraphs from a Halloon.

The Providence (S. L.) Journal of late date

Observes:

Our readers will remember with pleasure the account which Dr. Holmes, of this city, gave in the Journal, of a balloon ascension which he made at Boston on the Fourth of July. He suggested in his narrative the possibility of taking photographic views from the balloon. The dea has been active in his mind ever since. Accordingly, heand Mr. Black, of Boston, a renowned photographer, made the proper arrangements with Messes. King and Alien, of this city, for ascending, in order to try the experiment. They were delayed by the unpleasant weather, and then by an accident to the valve of the gas-pipe, which prevented them from filling their balloon at an early hour yesterday.

In the afternoon, however, the inflation was completed, and Mr. Black ascended to the hight of 1,200 feet, his balloon being held by a rope, where several attempts were made. The higher ascension, which would have furnished a more extended view, was necessarily postponed, because the clouds arose and obscured the sky. The entire results can not be known until the negative plates are fully developed; but we learn that Mr. Black regards it as demonstrated that bird's eye views may be taken in this way. The experiment is one of great interest, and we congratulate the gentlemen who have attempted it upon their success. We think that it has never been tried before, and we are sure that it has never been tried before, and we are sure that it has never been attempted with any success.

A MURDER CONVESSED THROUGH SUFERNSTYTOTA FRAR.—At Grorgetown, Delaware, a few days since, a roung white girl, fourteen years of age, was waylaid by a negro, struck over the head with a club, a string tied around ber neck until she was strangled,
and an outrage perpetrated spon her person,
and left dead in a ditch. Suspicion fastened upon the negro, but there was no witness to the hellish crime.

The negro, at the Coroner's inquest, was told to touch the body, but he refused. On the inquest re-assembling the negro was told that he must touch the body; this so frightened him that he confessed the whole transaction.

Of course his belief in the well known aupersition that wounds will bleed afresh if the body is touched by the murderer was the cause of his fear and of his confession.

In New York and those assuments of the which are capable of appreciating utilisar genius, is enjoying the pleasures and the profits of a most sitecessful engagement in California. By our exchanges we perceive that a large number of the most influential citizens of Sacramento tendered that young lady a benefit on the 5th of hast month, in appreciation of her professional talents as well as in acknowledgement of her estimable social virtues. She performed Camalle on the occasion, and the press is unanimous in its approval of the impersonation of that character by Miss Davenport. She will return to New York for the winter theatrical campaign.

Rope-Walking at Nabaut - A Perflom Fent. A Beston paper of late date says of one John Denier's rope-walking feats at Nahant:

An immense demourse of people was on the ground from Lynn, from all the fillages adjacent to Lynn, and even the residents of Nahant condescended to open their windows and look at the Bohemians, who streamed past their houses by hundreds, and cared for nothing but pop-corn and cheap clears.

streamed past their houses by hundreds, and cared for nothing but pop-corn and cheap cigars.

At half-past four the champion and artist made his appearance in silk tights, and gittering stars upon that portion of the body most completious when walking. He tried the rope, his pole was handed to him, and at the report of a pistol he commenced his journey. There was a breathless silence, as every one expected that he would fall and dash himself to pieces upon the rocks beneath, and all wanted to see that important portion of the entertainment. But fift. Denier had no such intention. He walked slowly and carefully, steadying his body with the pole, and always placing his feet firm, and keeping his eyes fixed upon the rope. He did not stop to dismos, or to lie down, or roll over, but kept on until he reached the end of his journey and landed upon terra firms in safety. Then there was an immenuse clapping of hands, and the show was over, but people took it rather ill that Mr. Denier did not fall and kill himself, or at least break every bone in his body. That was what they expected, and our folks don't like to be disappointed. The whole time occupied in crossing was about five minutes.

DEATH OF A BEAUTIPUL AND EMMINENT ACTRESS. — Miss Vandenhoff (Mrs. Swinbourne), the daughter of Vandenhoff, the tragedian, and herself an actress, died recently, in Birmingham, England. She was born in 1815: A Liverpool paper thus speaks of her. "About three years ago she married Mr. Swinbourne, an actor of some repute, but the union, we fear, was not a happy one. Our readers need not be told that the deceased was an accomplished and beautiful creature, full of genius and fine feeling, and that she was as good good as she was fair. In the classical drams she had no equal, for in her face was realized the dramm of Greenian artists. She was, we believe, an only daughter, and doted on by her afflicted father."
